

Wedgwood makes great London

buy. There's no better place to purchase Wedgwood ware than in England, where collections come out earlier—and often cheaper—than in the United States. Founded some 240 years ago by master potter Josiah Wedgwood I, the distinctive Wedgwood look has become an icon of elegance. Most recognizable are pieces in the distinctive powder-blue hue. But Wedgwood varies from pewter vases to Marrakech trinket boxes to Jasper cameo pendants. And now, ushering the heritage-rich business into this 21st century, are gorgeous linens, figurines, clocks, and frames. Sold at many locations throughout London, Wedgwood makes for a practical souvenir, classy gift, or charming addition to your tableware collection. Make a two-hour excursion to the company's outlet store at Stoke-on-Trent for even sweeter deals. ■
